April 2017

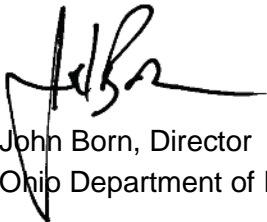

With every traffic crash we experience in Ohio, there is a human toll. Last year, 305,964 traffic crashes occurred in our state. These crashes resulted in more than 112,000 injuries and in 1,133 fatalities.

Traffic crashes are preventable and injuries can be significantly minimized through reducing the risks many take while behind the wheel. As you read through the 2016 Traffic Crash Facts Book, take notice that leading crash causes like speeding, failure to yield, driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs and distracted driving can all be reduced through education and enforcement aimed at changing these dangerous driving behaviors. Of particular concern, impaired drivers were involved in approximately 31 percent of all fatal traffic crashes and 431 vehicle occupants sustained fatal injuries because they did not wear an available safety belt.

Ohio's traffic safety education and awareness efforts focus on these behaviors in an effort to reduce traffic fatalities. Associated with these awareness efforts is high-visibility enforcement that often combines various law enforcement agencies with public and private sector safety partners.

Ohio is headed in the right direction. Over the past six years, Ohio roads are the safest they have ever been in our state's history. We need continued education, awareness and coordinated high-visibility enforcement efforts to change driver behavior and ultimately save even more lives in Ohio. It is my hope that collaborative partnerships formed by public safety agencies, our safety partners and private sector support can contribute toward dramatic improvements for safer Ohio roads and further reduce the human toll of traffic crashes.

Sincerely,

John Born, Director
Ohio Department of Public Safety
